

FHN FARMWORKER HEALTH NETWORK

Key Resources for Migrant Health

The Farmworker Health Network (FHN) is comprised of six National Cooperative Agreements in migrant health funded through the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to provide training and technical assistance to current and potential Migrant Health Center Programs. The FHN is committed to supporting the development of leadership within community and migrant health centers and increasing access to care for the migratory and seasonal agricultural worker (MSAW) population. We function as a trusted resource for health center staff and boards, helping them to fulfill their capacity-building needs. We also help them to incorporate service delivery options that are designed to enhance care to MSAWs and their families. FHN members collaborate as a team to address health center needs and bring multiple areas of expertise to bear in problem-solving. The FHN works to assure the visibility of the Migrant Health Program within HHS and other governmental and private organizations through the articulation of issues; analysis and comment on proposed policy and procedural documents; dissemination of population-specific information; and provision of technical assistance services to address the need for information, training, and education. Attached are key resources from each of the FHN members that highlight best practices and field-tested models.

Farmworker Fact Sheets

NCFH has developed a series of fact sheets with the most current research and authoritative information about a range of topics affecting MSAWs. These 2-4 page facts sheets cover topics such as current MSAW demographic information, mental health issues, tuberculosis, child labor, and profiles of indigenous MSAWs and those working in animal production industries.
