A Message from Farmworker Health Network (FHN)

The Farmworker Health Network (FHN) stands with everyone impacted by the Coronavirus (COVID-19), especially health providers and patients from special and vulnerable populations. In a consolidated effort to bring to you the latest updates, the FHN will be sending out this biweekly email with resources and information to keep you informed and assist you in continuing to serve your patient population. Information related to this pandemic changes daily, so we also encourage you to visit the CDC's website for additional updates that may impact your specific service areas.

AGRICULTURAL WORKERS AND MENTAL HEALTH

Mental health is an important component of an individual's overall health. During times of crisis, like the current pandemic, it is especially critical to prioritize your mental health and practice self-care. Agricultural workers, however, may have more difficulty identifying, treating, and overcoming mental health concerns due to the multiple challenges they face including language barriers, poor access to health insurance, and high rates of poverty. Poor mental health affects an individual's productivity, their hobbies and motivations, their ability to handle life challenges, and their overall contentment and ability to enjoy life. NCFH has compiled some mental health resources that may be helpful as you navigate the impact of COVID-19 at your health center and continue to treat vulnerable patient populations, including agricultural workers. To view and download these resources, please visit our COVID-19 webpage.

The COVID-19 Pandemic and Mobile Patients

Migrant Clinicians Network is presently developing strategies and resources to support clinicians as they reach out to communities that are often overlooked and give care to patients who might otherwise have nowhere to go. We remain highly concerned for the vulnerable populations that already encounter numerous barriers to health and to care.

Always presume that the virus is present. Our understanding of its spread remains limited. Asymptomatic individuals may be unwittingly spreading the virus. In the absence of extensive testing and given our early understanding of the disease, take full precautions as if COVID-19 is present.

Farmworker Justice Policy Update:

Representative Khanna and Senator Warren recently introduced an Essential Worker Bill of Rights. The Essential Worker Bill of Rights outlines policies aimed to protect essential workers, including farmworkers, for inclusion in the next COVID relief bill. These policies include health and safety protections, premium compensation for essential workers, and universal paid sick and family leave, among others. More information about the Essential Worker Bill of Rights can be found here.

Farmworker Justice Policy Update

Several states issued guidance through their state agencies regarding COVID-19 and agricultural workers. Oregon OSHA issued a temporary rule addressing COVID-19 in employer-provided housing, labor intensive agricultural operations, and agricultural transportation. The rule went into effect on May 11, 2020. Several other states issued COVID-19 guidance for agricultural employers. Consult your state's department of agriculture, department of health, or department of labor for any published guidance. AgWorker Health 102: Supporting Agricultural Worker Health during the COVID-19 Pandemic Webinar

Wednesday, May 13th - 2:00 PM – 3:30 PM, EST

Health Centers serving the agricultural worker community are adept at addressing the unique needs of agricultural worker patients and families and developing innovative and strategic models of service delivery. The onslaught of COVID-19 in our communities is disrupting business as usual and health centers are quickly adapting to meet the new and expanding needs of their ag worker patients as the COVID-19 pandemic exacerbates traditional barriers/challenges to care. In this webinar, presenters will share information on agricultural worker protections, health needs, and service delivery challenges, and provide an opportunity to highlight and share T/TA opportunities, resources, and promising practices to help support health center staff in the front lines of this pandemic.

Is COVID-19 Airborne? A Q&A with Chad Roy, PhD and Ed Zuroweste, MD

Webinar from Migrant Clinicians Network (MCN)

Wednesday May 13th - 12:00pm PDT, 3:00pm EDT

The virus behind the COVID-19 pandemic can stay infectious in the air for more than 12 hours. What does this mean for clinicians on the frontlines? Do these findings change the recommendations clinicians make to patients? Please join MCN for a Q and A on this topic with Chad Roy, PhD a microbiologist and Director of the Infectious Disease Aerobiology and Biodefense research programs at Tulane University and Ed Zuroweste, MD, founding chief medical officer of Migrant Clinicians Network.
